*UWB: stands for Ultra-Wideband. This technology precisely measures the duration of the radio signal between the vehicle and the key. If this duration is too long due to illegal signal range extension, the vehicle remains locked.

Motion sensor (in the key): If the key remains stationary for a certain period, its signal is deactivated, rendering the devices used by thieves in ADAC tests ineffective. However, if the key is in motion (for example, when the driver is walking), the car can still be illegally opened and stolen. The first thief only needs to approach the driver within a few meters, while the second thief opens and drives away the car. In ADAC tests, a five-minute waiting period is applied - if the key deactivates during this time, this information is noted in the test results.
